ENCOURAGE MILK PRODUCTION.

A Mr. Koehler of San Antonio, who is experienced in the creamery and dairy business, met with the directors of the Chamber of Commerce last Friday night and discussed with them a plan to establish a cream station and ice-cream factory at Hondo.

Mr. Koehler made such a favorable impression that he was invited to attend the next Lions Club Luncheon and to address a mass meeting of the citizens at the Chamber of Commerce Hall at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, April 15.

It is the wish of the Board of Directors that every farmer and homemaker within the trade radius of Hondo, who has a cow or thinks they have a milk one, come out and hear what Mr. Koehler has to say. If he can tell us how we can make more profits out of caring for cows and thereby be enabled to depend less on the boll-weevil beset cotton, he will have rendered a service of inestimable value to our community.

DO NOT FORGET—

THE PLACE—Chamber of Commerce Hall.

THE TIME—8 o'clock P. M., April 15.

COME AND HEAR HIM!

"NO MAN'S LAND."

"No Man's Land," a one-act musical comedy pleased an appreciative audience at the High School Auditorium Friday night of last week. The comedy was the original production of Mr. Ed. Armstrong, who not only composed and arranged it but selected the characters and directed the production.

The personnel of the play was composed of two groups of girls from two Seminaries. They meet at the Topsy Turvy Hotel, and indulge in numerous girlish escapades to the discomfort of their old-maid chaperons and the great amusement of the audience.

The young ladies carried it off well and along with the laughable features rendered some very creditable vocal and instrumental music.

As a prelude to the play, Mr. Armstrong introduced the Hondo Municipal Orchestra in a concert that alone would have been worth the price of admission. We dare say that for the short time the Orchestra has been in practice all were agreeably surprised at the splendid manner in which it acquitted itself.

Friday night's program was a two-fold success to the credit of Director Armstrong—the creditable manner in which the young ladies interpreted his comedy production and the evidence of competent musical training manifested in the performance of the orchestra.

BACHELORS CAPTURE GAME FROM HENPECKEDS

Eleven runs in the first inning gave the Bachelors a big enough lead to capture the second of the Single-Married Men's series and make the count one each in games. The first session and scored six runs, but as both teams netted one run each the rest of the game, the final count was 12 to 7 in favor of the Free Men.

A donkey belonging to Rollie C. Bless got his neck tangled up in a rope swing one night this week and when found had choked itself to death. Some experts in donkey psychology contend that the moonlight had made the donkey sentimental and he was trying to swing himself—in the grape vine swing—so to speak. Others, equally as authoritative contend that the melancholy brute committed suicide "with malice aforethought." But as neither medical postmortem nor legal inquest was held it was never legally or scientifically determined whether the deed was an accident or done on purpose. Yes; as you doubtless have inferred by this time, the donkey is dead!

After the first side of our paper had been made up for the press this week, an unexpected run of advertising towards the last of the week all but swamped us. If our other three outside pages look more like an advertising circular than a newspaper we hope you will find plenty of good news in the advertisements and not miss anything we may have left out. There is money-saving news for you if you will read the advertising. We hope you will read it and so profit by patronizing our advertisers that they will be constrained to SWAMP US AGAIN!

The first serious effort to grade and drain the alley passing east and west through the post office block was made this week under the direction of Commissioner Buss. The work was done by Pete Harlee and though untrained as a drainage engineer, it looks to us like a successful job, and we hope the unsightly mudholes that have followed every rain are now a thing of the past.

CHEVROLET EXPANSION.

DETROIT, April 10—The Chevrolet Motor Company today announces an expansion of its production capacity through the opening last week of the rebuilt and enlarged assembly and export plant at Tarrytown, N. Y.

The new Tarrytown plant has a capacity of 900 cars daily and is one of the nine assembly plants and one of the two export plants maintained by Chevrolet in the United States.

Completion of this plant places Chevrolet in a more advantageous position to meet rapidly expanding sales requirements for its product along the Atlantic seaboard. In addition, the move was made to thoroughly modernize the plant and bring it up to the high standard of equipment and efficiency that characterizes Chevrolet plants in other sections of the country.

The new plant is a one story, brick and steel structure, 1,200 by 400 feet, with monitor type roof, providing for the maximum light and ventilation. Adjoining it is a new two story office building, 200 by 20 feet, of concrete and brick construction.

The plant has two domestic assembly lines and an export boxing line. The export division of the Tarrytown plant serves many countries at present inaccessible to overseas Chevrolet plants. In several instances, Chevrolet is more expedient to ship direct from Tarrytown to a foreign country than from a Chevrolet plant overseas. In the case of the Tarrytown plant this applies only to countries that receive only cars fully assembled. The other Chevrolet export plant at Bloomfield, N. J., ships only knocked down parts for assembly at General Motors plants overseas.

The finished Chevrolet cars, assembled and boxed at Tarrytown are put on barges and floated down to New York city, where they are put aboard ships for various parts of the world.

Divine service will be held and the Holy Communion celebrated this day in Bethlehem Lutheran church. Announcements for the Holy Communion should be made previous Good Friday. All are cordially invited to this and all services in this church. No Lenten service will be held next Wednesday night.

Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock divine service will be held in St. John's Lutheran church at New Fountain. A cordial invitation to this and all services in this church is extended to all.

Last Thursday the Lutheran Ladies' Aid society held a very interesting and well attended meeting in the Quih parish hall. All routine business was attended to and adjourned with dispatch. An interesting paper on Lent was read by the pastor. After adjournment a splendid luncheon was served by Mesdames J. Lindeburg and David Burnett.

Sunday night, April 13, a fine program, interesting and entertaining will be given by the Quih Lutheran League at 8 o'clock in Bethlehem Lutheran church. All are cordially invited to come and enjoy this program of choice musical selections and interesting and educating readings.

SELF-HELP THAT COUNTS.

Five co-eds from the Sul Ross State Teachers College have formed a novel way to help meet their college expenses. As they have more time and industry than money, they garden.

They all stay at the same home and cook their own meals there. The garden is a community affair. Just now, they say, the pickings from the garden are pretty slim and they are able to supplement their regular fare only by onions and lettuce. But when the summer comes they plan to treat royally on everything from eggplants to Brussels sprouts.

The girls who are trying the experiment are: Lela Eubank, Ballinger; Irene Wouliard, Pecos; Alice Neuman, Hondo; Audie McIlroy, Uvalde; and Omie Breck, La Mesa.

For Economical Transportation

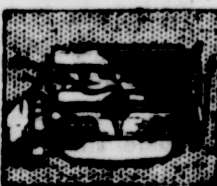

It's wise to choose a SIX!

After all, it is a perfectly simple matter to decide which automobile to buy in today's market. Only two questions must be answered to your satisfaction—

First: Which car gives the most for my money?

Second: Which car represents the soundest investment in satisfaction and pride of ownership?

Six-Cylinder Motor

In buying a low-priced car consider the following facts:

It is wise to choose a six-cylinder motor—for six cylinders are necessary to take out vibration and roughness. Six-cylinder smoothness will save the motor, the chassis, the body, the passengers and the driver.

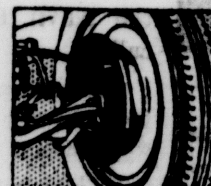

The Chevrolet is a six. And yet it sells at a price that anyone can afford to pay.

This very low-priced car lasts longer, not only because of fine materials and oversize parts, but also because it is a six. Its big, smooth, 50-horsepower six-cylinder engine is always "taking it easy." There is no feeling of strain.

With all its six-cylinder smoothness and power the New Chevrolet Six uses no extra gasoline or oil. Efficient design makes this possible—overhead valves—high compression power from any fuel—very latest carburetor—close-fitting, long-wearing pistons—crankcase ventilation—air cleaner. You can really have extreme economy and still satisfy your ideal of truly modern transportation.

Chevrolet economy is also the mark of Chevrolet sincerity in manufacture. To illustrate:

Chevrolet valves are readily accessible and adjustable. This saves replacing valves, and also makes it possible to preserve the efficiency of the engine.

Fully Enclosed Brakes

A similar example is found in Chevrolet's molded brake lining—reducing the necessity of frequent replacement, and consequent expense.

Furthermore, there is a rear axle inspection plate on the Chevrolet.

This makes it unnecessary to take the axle apart to examine or clean it.

The new Chevrolet Six is full of such evidence that true motor car economy comes from modern advancement and refinement.

Like the finest cars, the Chevrolet Six provides the comfort and protection of four springs controlled by hydraulic shock absorbers. They are mounted lengthwise, in the direction of car travel, and self-adjusting spring shackles maintain quiet.

Delco-Lorain Shock Absorbers

With low suspension and extra wheelbase, the Chevrolet Six has excellent proportions.

Its impressive front view is distinguished by the genuine honeycomb radiator, another mark of modern cars.

Safety Gasoline Tank

The gasoline tank is in the rear, for safety and finer appearance.

Chevrolet beauty instantly says "Body by Fisher"—costly car style, with the permanent quiet of Fisher composite steel-and-wood construction.

FISHER

There is just as much extra value everywhere in the car. BY ANY STANDARD the Chevrolet Six is the greatest value in the low-price field.

It is wise to choose the Chevrolet Six with its six-cylinder valve-in-head motor... with full scientific equipment... with its Body by Fisher... with four long semi-elliptic springs, long wheelbase, low suspension, rear-mounted gas tank, honeycomb radiator and all the other features of this day and age.

See your nearest Chevrolet dealer today and drive a Chevrolet Six. Ten minutes at the wheel will show you what a difference six cylinders make.

THE LURE OF BURIED TREASURE.

Sam Ashburn in Uvalde Leader News.

J. J. Bendele of Uvalde has spent many of his 63 years searching for the 13 deposits of buried treasure that the Mexican general Santa Anna believed to have hidden in his search from El Paso to San Antonio. Each of these caches of treasure is said to have $85,000 in silver. Once Bendele was sleeping 200 yards from a spot, from Junction, when buried treasure was removed, and the very spot from which it was removed had been his pillow for several years, he, like other cowpunchers, using the same camping place as often as possible. Prospector for mines in Mexico and Texas, wild horse breaker, expert cow hand, Bendele has spent most of his thought in the location of the treasure that others have hidden in the earth.

Never tiring of the search, he is looking now for what he says is the last of the $85,000 hidden in Texas by Santa Anna, and he believes it is in Uvalde. In the meantime, he had started a process for killing ants and has killed 293 beds in Uvalde in the past year. He also has ants in the neighboring towns and with this money carries on the search, for he believes what he finds will make him rich.

His wife, however, doesn't share his belief, "It's all impossible," she says. "Well, I'll show you some day, mama," he replies.

"But dear, we are growing old," she answers.

"Yes, but we may find it tomorrow," he says.

Bendele is the brother of the man, Ben Bendele, who first rode a horse across the Pecos high bridge.

From El Paso to San Antonio went the trail of Santa Anna via Sheffield, El Rio, Hondo, Medina, Banderita, Kerr County, Johnson City, Menard, Llano, Austin, then to San Antonio and in his journey, says Bendele, 13 caches of silver, each of $85,000, were hidden.

All but one of the number has been found, he believes, and that last one he is now searching for within the corporate limits of Uvalde. He, however, found several treasure workings on the big liveoak trees in the city.

Here is where Bendele says he knows the treasure is buried:

Crockett County, near Sheffield and Llano. At the San Felipe springs in the Rio. It too, has found its way to the hands of another generation.

On the Hondo Creek near Hondo

another $85,000 has been located. The Mormon camp now under the waters of the Medina river near Castroville, has yielded its wealth to the hands of diggers. At Ingram, near Kerrville, one of the five piles of rock responded to digging with the clinking silver coins. Near the head of Elm Creek, just above Junction, Mexican diggers uncovered the cache there. Near Juno the treasure, too, has been uncovered. A man digging a cellar at Llano unearthed another $85,000 and there are three other places where this treasure was buried that he fails to recall.

The formula for finding one of these caches of coin is illustrated by the treasure at Mormon camp. There, relates Bendele, he found a tree with a nail made of a mule shoe pointing to a cross in the tree. The cross was at the bottom of the tree and above it were nine slashes. He walked nine steps and found the first rock pile. He dug into it and into the other four, finding in each of them ashes, placed there by those who had hid the coin, in an effort to lead those who might investigate the piles to believe that they had stumbled into an old barbecue pit. Each of the rock piles was a yard square and so placed in the ground as to attract no attention. In the bottom of the hole where the money had been contained he found the sticks of liveoak wood placed there to prevent the weight of the coin sinking into the earth. They were four feet deep.

Once in 1887, while Bendele was working on the Prosser Ranch near Juno, a Mexican sheepherder told him of a tree with unusual marking. He visited the tree, found the telltale cross and laid his plans for the search. Finding the rock pile, he prepared to dig one morning when he found a group of men camped in a tent at the site. The men were very polite to him but did not invite him into the tent. They left in the night leaving the hole with liveoak sticks in the bottom, indicating the removal of the coins. Again he was near fortune, but missed it by only a day. This cash was located near Comstock. Bendele was at that time only a trapper.

He says some of the outstanding fortunes of the Southwest have been based on these $85,000 collections of coins hidden by Santa Anna. Some of the treasure has been found by Americans while Mexicans have claimed some of it.

Bendele's first acquaintance with buried treasure was quite by accident but it demonstrated to him that such actually did exist and sent him in pursuit of them through the years. In his early days he was a wild horse breaker for the Western Union Beef Co., and working for many of the cow outfits of the country. He was an old time horse trader, too, who traveled the hill country and the Fort Stockton country regularly with his collection of horses. When near Junction he camped always at the mouth of Elm Creek, six miles from Junction, and usually threw his saddle down on the rock tract about a yard square.

Returning from Fort McKavett, where he had taken a race horse to meet another fast horse of a rival racing man, he met a group of cowmen heading to the Devils River, looking for cattle. Bendele had nothing to do in particular as his man had failed to keep the appointment at McKavett, and thus he joined them. He suggested they camp at the mouth of Elm Creek and thither the group of four wandered. They had been to a barbecue, and having some of the meat with them, the party stopped at the river and ate. Then they proceeded to the mouth of Elm Creek where Bendele searched for his rock pile just as a traveling man of today looks for his hotel. He failed to find it. The party camped a short distance away from it about 200 yards.

During the night there were sounds of digging. Bendele awakened twice to hear the noise of picks. In the morning he discovered this old rock pile had been excavated. Looking through the dirt that had been left, he found $7 in Mexican money, coins he things were placed there by Santa Anna. Then he remembered that two intelligent appearing Mexicans, in a new wagon and with fine horses, asked the party the way to the mouth of Elm Creek.

"Let's catch them," said one of the party, and headed off in the direction the wagon tracks showed the midnight visitors had gone. Then one of the party suggested that they had better make their morning coffee and then catch them. The party never went on the chase. Bendele had been sleeping for years with his pillow over a collection of $85,000 in silver, placed there by Santa Anna. Then he began the search himself, later attempting to find the treasure near Comstock and then that near Castroville.

He says that under a tree about 12 miles from Castroville is hidden much of the equipment used by Santa Anna. Then he remembered that he dug this up once, but, getting drunk on a jug of whiskey, covered it up again and went after some more whiskey. Those relics are still there, only a few cannon balls going to Austin.

Though he has found only $7 in his years of search for buried treasure, he still persists in the hunt and thinks that some day in spite of his age he will reach his goal. He knows every foot of the western country and most of its traditions. He has lived in the cow camps all his life and spends his spare time now in prospecting for mineral wealth in the canyon country. There is a lost quick-silver mine near Uvalde, he believes, with several other minerals in it, and some day he plans to open it.

Nature Our Best Teacher

Even in Winter the rain and the snow
Are stored in the soil to make our crops grow;
It's the wisdom of nature, who keeps things in store,
Prepares for future so we may have more.
Since nature so wisely shows by her plan
That storing will add to the comfort of man,
It looks like man this lesson would heed,
And store for himself the things he may need.
The HONDO STATE BANK has looked all around
But no better teacher than nature has found.

HOLLOWAY BROTHERS

OPTOMETRISTS TO MEET IN DALLAS.

Conservation and preservation of the eyesight of the people of this state is the aim of the Texas Optometric Association, which will hold its 30th annual convention in Dallas April 21, 22 and 23, according to Dr. V. A. Crow, a leading Hondo optometrist.

To this end, among the subjects discussed at the convention by state members and speakers from various parts of the county will be a universal examination of the eyes of school children and employees of large industries, who are not functioning properly, Dr. Crow said here today.

"Some of these requirements are already in force in other states," Dr. Crow said, "and in many localities optometrists who have assisted in getting remedial regulation put through have given their services free of charge to the state."

"The chief aim of the association in Texas is to help the people of this complex civilization in which we are living adjust their vision to conditions," he explained. "It is a mistake to say that the eyesight of the people is deteriorating. Our lives have become complicated and our eyesight accustomed to wide spaces, long vision, rest and not to constant close work to which we submit our eyes in our own day. Our teeth, too, are still savages' teeth, needing rough food, and our eyes are in the same condition, not ready for the strain that is being put upon them."

Many reports of research work in the North and East as well as in Texas will be heard at the convention. The research committee in Texas is headed by Dr. H. H. Gerdes of Waco, with Dr. Stanley Block and Dr. G. Henry Aronsfeld of Houston, working with him.

Hundreds of optometrists are expected to attend the meeting which will be held in the Adolphus hotel. The program committee, composed of Drs. J. Arthur Bragg, Samuel Burstin and R. A. Terrell, all of Dallas, have planned an unusually interesting program not only for the members but for the public generally, Dr. Crow said.

The above reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person stealing Gasoline or Oil from the Texas Company Bulk station at D'Hanis, Texas.

ZEN of the Y. D.

A Novel of the Foothills

By ROBERT STEAD

"The Cow Puncher"—"The Homesteaders"—"Neighbors," etc.

Zen contemplated for some minutes the possibilities of that race; then, as the imagination threatened to become involved, she sprang from her cot and thrust a cautious head through the door of her tent. The gang had long since gone to the fields, and friendly bushes sheltered her from view from the cook car. She drew on her boots, shook out her hair, threw a towel across her shoulders, and, soap in hand, walked boldly the few steps to the stream rippling over its shiny gravel bed. She stopped and tested the water with her fingers; then brought it in fresh, cool handfuls about her face and neck.

"Mornin', Zen!" said a familiar voice. "Scuse me for happenin' to be here. I was jus' waterin' that Pete-horse after a hard ride."

"Now look here, Mr. Drakz!" said the girl, whipping her scanty clothing about her. "If I had a gun—I won't have you spyin' about!"

"Aw, don't be cross," Drakz protested. He was sitting on his horse in the ford a dozen yards away. "I jus' happened along. I guess the outside belongs to all of us. Say, Zen, if I was to get properly introduced, what's the chances?"

"Not one in a million, and if that isn't odds enough I'll double it."

"You're not goin' to hitch up with Linder, are you?"

"Linder? Who said anything about Linder?"

"Gee, but ain't she innocent?" Drakz stepped his horse up a few feet to facilitate conversation. "I alius take an interest in innocent gals away from home, so I kinda kep' my angel eye on you las' night. An' I see Linder stalkin' around here an' sighin' out over the water when he should 'ave been in bed. But, of course, he's been interduced."

"George Drakz, if you speak to me again I'll horsewhip you out of the camp at noon before all the men. Now, beat it!"

"Jus, as you say, ma'am," he returned, with mock courtesy. "But you don't need to be scared. That's one thing I never do—I never squeal on a friend."

She was burning with his insults, and if she had had a gun at hand she undoubtedly would have used it. But she had none. Drakz very deliberately turned his horse and rode away toward the meadows.

"Oh, won't I fix him!" she said, as she continued her toilet in a fury. She had not the faintest idea what revenge she would take, but she promised herself that it would leave nothing to be desired. Then, because she was young and healthy and an optimist, and did not know what it meant to be afraid, she dismissed the incident from her mind to consider the more urgent matter of breakfast.

Tompkins, the cook, had not needed Transley's suggestion to put his best foot forward when catering to Y.D. and his daughter. Tompkins' soul yearned for a cooking berth that could be occupied the year round. Work in the railway camps had always left him high and dry at the freeze-up—dry, particularly, and a few nights in Calgary or Edmonton saw the end of his season's earnings. Then came a precarious existence for Tompkins until the scrapers were back on the dump the following spring. A steady job, cooking on a ranch like the Y.D.; if Tompkins had written the Apocalypse that would have been his picture of heaven. So he had left nothing undone, even to despatching a courier over night to a railway station thirty miles away for fresh fruit and other delicacies. Another of the gang had been impressed into a trip up the river to a squatter who was suspected of keeping one or two milch cows and sundry hens.

"This way, ma'am," Tompkins was waving as Zen emerged from the grove. "Another of our usual mornings. Hope you slep' well, ma'am." He stood deferentially aside while she ascended the three steps that led into the covered wagon.

Zen gave a little shriek of delight, and Tompkins felt that all his efforts had been well repaid. One end of the table—it was with a sore heart Tompkins had realized that he could not cut down the big table—one end of the table was set with a clean linen cloth and granite dishware scoured until it shone. Besides Zen's plate were grapefruit and sliced oranges and real cream.

"However did you manage it?" she gasped.

"Nothing's too good for Y.D.'s daughter," was the only explanation Tompkins would offer, but, as Zen afterwards said, the smile on his face was as good as another breakfast. After the fruit came porridge, and more cream; then fresh boiled eggs with toast; then fresh ripe strawberries with more cream.

"Mr.—Mr.—"

"Tompkins, ma'am; Cyrus Tompkins," he supplied.

"Well, Mr. Tompkins, you're a wonder, and when there's a new cook to be engaged for the Y.D. I shall think of you."

"Indeed I wish you would, ma'am," he said, earnestly. "This road works all right, and nobody ever cooked for a better boss than Mr. Transley—savin' it would be your father, ma'am—but I'm a man of family, an' its pretty hard—"

"Family, did you say, Mr. Tompkins? How many of a family have you?"

"Well, it's seven years since I heard from them—I haven't corresponded very reglar of late, but they was six—"

The story of Tompkins' family was cut short by the arrival of a team and moving machine.

"What's up, Fred?" called Tompkins through a window of his dining car to the driver. "Breakfast is just over, an' dinner ain't begun."

For answer the man addressed as Fred slowly produced an iron stake about eighteen inches long and somewhat less than an inch in diameter.

"What kind of shrubbery do you call that, Tompkins?" he demanded.

"Well, it ain't buffalo grass, an' it ain't brome grass, an' I don't figger it's alfalfa," said Tompkins, meditatively.

"No, and it ain't a grub stake," Fred replied, with some sarcasm. "It's a iron stake, growin' right in a nice little clump of grass, and I run on to it and bust my cuttin'-bar all to—that is, all to pieces," he completed rather lamely, taking Zen into his glance.

"I think I follow you," she said, with a smile. "Can you fix it here?"

"Nope. Have to go to town for a new one. Two days' lost time, when every hour counts. Hello! Here comes someone else."

Another of the teamsters was drawing into camp. "Hello, Fred!" he said, upon coming up with his fellow workman, "you in too? I had a bit of bad luck. I run smash on to an iron stake right there in the ground and crumpled my knife like so much soap."

"I did worse," said Fred, with a grin. "I bust my cuttin'-bar."

The two men exchanged a steady glance for half a minute. Then the newcomer gave vent to a long, low whistle.

"So that's the way of it," he said. "That's the kind of war Mr. Landson makes. Well, we can fight back with the same weapons, but that won't cut the hay, will it?"

By this time Y.D. and Transley, with four other teamsters, were observed coming in. Each driver had had the same experience. An iron stake, carefully hidden in a clump of grass, had been driven down into the ground until it was just high enough to intercept the cutting-bar. The fine, sharp knives were crumpled against it; in some cases the heavy cutting-bar, in which the knives operate, was damaged.

Y.D.'s face was black with fury.

"That's the lowest, meanest, cowardliest trick I ever had pulled on me," he was saying. "I'm plumb equal to ridin' down to Landson's an' drivin' one of them stakes through under his short ribs."

"But can you prove that Landson did it?" said Zen, who had an element of caution in her when her father was concerned. She had a vision of a fight, with Landson pleading entire ignorance of the whole cause of offense, and her father probably summoned by the police for unprovoked assault.

"No, I can't prove that Landson did it, an' I can't prove that the grass my steers eat turns to hair on their backs," he retorted, "but I reach my own conclusions. Is there any shootin' irons in the place?"

"Now, Dad, that's enough," said the girl, firmly. "There'll be no shooting between you and Landson. If there is to be anything of that kind I'll ride down ahead and warn him of what's comin'."

"Darter," said Y.D.—it was only on momentous occasions that he addressed her as daughter—"I brought you over here as a guest, not as manager of my affairs. I've taken care of these affairs for some considerable years, an' I reckon I still have the qualifications. If you're a-goin' to act up obstreperous I'll get Mr. Transley to lend me a man to escort you home."

"At your service, Y.D.," said George Drakz, who was in the crowd which had gathered about the rancher, his daughter, and Transley. "That Pete-horse an' me would jus' see her over the hills a-whoopin'."

"I don't think it would be wise to take any extreme measures, at least, not just yet," said Transley. "It's out of the question to suppose that Landson has picketed the whole valley with those stakes. It is now quite clear why we were left in peace yesterday. He wanted us to get started, and get a few swaths cut, so that he would know where to drive the stakes to catch us the next morning. Some of these machines can be repaired at once, and the others within a day or two. We will just move over a little and start on new fields. There's pretty good moonlight these nights and we'll leave a few men out on guard, and perhaps we can catch the enemy at his little game. Let us get one of Landson's men with the goods on him."

Y.D. was somewhat pacified by this suggestion. "You're a practical devil, Transley," he said, with considerable admiration. "Now, in a case of this kind I jus' get plumb fightin' mad. I want to bore somebody. I guess it's the only kind o' procedure that comes easy to my hand. I guess you're right, but I hate to let anybody have the laugh on me." Y.D. looked down the valley, shading his eyes with his hand.

"That son-of-a-gun has got a dozen or more stacks down there. I don't wish nobody any hard luck, but if some tenderfoot was to drop a cigar—"

"In that case I suppose you'd pray for a west wind, Dad," Zen suggested, "but the winds in these valleys, even with your prayers to direct them, are none too reliable."

"Everybody to work on fixing up these machines," Transley ordered. "Linder, make a list of what repairs are needed and Drakz will ride to town with it at once. Some of them may have to come out from the city by express. Drakz can get the orders in and a team will follow to bring out the repairs."

In a moment Transley's men were busy with wrenches and hammers, replacing knives and appraising damages. Even in his anger Y.D. took approving note of the promptness of Transley's decisions and the zest with which his men carried them into effect.

"A he-man, that fellow, Zen," he confided to his daughter. "If he'd blown into this country thirty years ago, like I did, he'd own it by this time plumb to the sky-line."

When the list of repairs was completed Linder handed it—

COMMUNITY SPIRIT NEEDED.

By Edgar W. Cooley,
Agricultural Extension Department
International Harvester Company.

Let us make the state in which we live a greater state, our community a greater community. This will not be hard if we will lay aside all self interest and co-operate—work together.

The first essential is a greater community spirit. If all of us labor, not for our own selfish interests, but for the common good of all, we can make our community, our state, one of the best places in which to live.

With a united community spirit we can do anything—without it, we can do nothing.

Many things will be needed to make a greater community. We must have better country schools. Our farm boys and girls, as well as our city boys and girls, must be given a square deal. All must be given equal educational opportunities.

We must make our homes more homelike. Nine times out of ten when a boy or a girl leaves home, they should leave it. There is something the matter with the home. A homelike home in the country will keep the boy and girl on the farm. When home ties are not just as strong as they should be, they are easily broken.

Health is our greatest wealth. When our own health and the health of our family is poor, we are poor indeed. We must safeguard our health. We must have better sanitation—more modern conveniences. These can be installed in any farm home at small expense.

We must encourage home ownership. The only real home is that which is rooted in the soil. If we can help a man to own a home, even a modest cottage, and at least one acre of ground, we will be doing a real service to our community and our state.

We must see that every boy and girl owns something—a calf, a lamb, a garden or some crop. We must recognize his title to the property. It must not be Willie's pig and Dad's hog.

We must increase production and learn how to market and one of the needful things in both these is to build good roads.

We can have these things if we really want them, but we must work for them—fight for them. We must work together—town and country, men and women, boys and girls.

COPPER VESSELS MAY PROVE FATAL TO STOCK.

By Juliette Frazier.

During the summer months when the natural watering places in the pasture run dry, the question of how to water the stock often presents a perplexing problem.

Last summer when P. H. Morton, angora goat raiser of Washington County, Oregon, was faced with this difficulty, he believed he had the problem solved by sinking into the ground an old copper boiler which he filled with water. By hauling a barrelful of water up to it every few days, the boiler was easily kept full of fresh water for the stock.

One day as Mr. Morton approached the boiler, he noticed several goats standing around it as if desiring to drink, but although there was still enough water in the boiler, they refrained from drinking. Closer investigation revealed that a gopher had fallen into the water and drowned. The gopher evidently had been in the water several days; long enough to pollute the water. After removing the dead gopher, and dipping out as much water as possible, the boiler was refilled with fresh water, and some slack lime poured into it.

A few days later Mr. Morton found two of his goats very sick. They were immediately brought in from the pasture into the barn where "first aid" was administered; but all efforts to save them proved futile. By the following morning both were dead. Later that day Mr. Morton went into the pasture to look after the remainder of his stock, and to his dismay found several more sick goats. After the third goat had succumbed, she was cut open, and it was discovered that all her digestive tract was full of holes. Upon this discovery a veterinary was called. After a careful examination of the dead and the sick animals, the doctor attributed the cause of the trouble to the fact that when the lime was put into the copper boiler it formed a copper solution so strong that it burned holes into the goat's internal organs. Although the cause of the trouble was discovered, it was discovered too late! In less than one week after the first two sick goats had been found, Mr. Morton lost every one of his herd of sixty-six goats.

MAKING WHITEWASH.

The easiest way to make whitewash is simply to add water to hydrated lime that has been well protected from the air. However, if hydrated lime is not available, fresh quick lime may be slaked with clean water by the following process. Use a clean wooden pail, keg or barrel and add the water a little at a time. Slaking may be hastened by breaking up some of the lumps or by adding a little hot water. When slaking is well started, add more water to replace that lost. If not enough water is used the lime will become "scorched" and part of it will be granular. On the other hand, too much water may retard or "quench" the slaking process. After the lime is completely slaked, add enough water to make a thick paste, cover the container with boards to keep in the heat, and let it stand for at least several hours. Strain the paste through wire fly screen and thin to brushing consistency with clean water.

DEVOTED.

Mrs. Once—"Was your first husband devoted to you?"

Mrs. Twice—"He surely was. Why on the coldest winter's night he would think nothing of getting up from his warm bed and lying down beside the crack under the door to protect me from draughts."

The Census of Agriculture In 1930

The importance of the census of agriculture in 1930, which is about to be taken, can hardly be overestimated since agriculture is still the great fundamental industry of the United States. This inventory of all the farm property together with the report covering the last preceding year's production of the important crops and livestock products will show the value of the investment in agriculture and the volume of the farmer's production. It also will supply the data upon which official estimates of farm products are based for the succeeding five years. Yet so vast is the farming industry and so elusive are many of the elements or conditions affecting the result of farm operations that crop and other estimates would quickly lose their significance and become practically valueless if they were not regularly revised in the light of actual census returns.

The farm census is taken primarily for the benefit of the farmer. While comparatively few of them make personal use of the farm statistics of the census, it should be borne in mind that the data provide the agricultural colleges and the great body of writers for the agricultural press and for economic periodicals with the facts upon which their most valuable studies and analyses are based. Upon the accuracy of the information given by the farmer depends to a large extent the value of the statistical work to be carried on in the farmer's behalf, not only by the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture, but by students of agricultural conditions in all parts of the world. To what extent the very marked increase during recent years in the cost of living and especially in the cost of certain kinds of farm produce is due to shortage in production is a question of vital moment to a vast number of people. A complete and accurate census of farm areas and products will furnish data which, when studied in connection with the revised population figures, should throw more light on the great question of our national food supply. While the first census of population was taken in 1790, a census of agriculture, the one industry in which the great body of our people were engaged as a means of livelihood, was not authorized by the Congress until the Decennial Census of 1840 and then less than 30 questions relating principally to production and livestock were propounded to the individual farmer. The wisdom of the Congress in constantly increasing the scope of the farm census from its inception down to the present time has done much to further the gradual development of farming in this country from a primitive "means of subsistence," in which every farmer sought to work out his salvation according to his own ideas, into a great national industry, highly organized and specialized, and constituting a science in itself. A census of agriculture is now taken at five-year intervals.

The census of 1850 was the first in which a special agricultural schedule was used and carried 46 questions. It is a far cry from this meager beginning of a real census of agriculture in the United States to the census of 1930, which not only includes Continental United States but Alaska, Hawaii, Guam, American Samoa, Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands—wherever there is a farm at home or in outlying possessions, the Census Bureau must have a report.

The census of agriculture in Continental United States in 1930 will not only be a census of all farms, but also of incidental farm products and live stock not on farms, and of irrigation and drainage enterprises.

It has become increasingly difficult to prepare a GENERAL FARM SCHEDULE for a census of agriculture. This is due primarily to the necessity of making one form with basic inquires for the whole United States. Various localities and sections of our country and various interests, some personal and some otherwise, attempt in every way possible to place questions in the schedule which are not of general interest and many of which are for selfish purposes. The field of agriculture in the United States has become so complex that it takes time and effort to make up a GENERAL FARM SCHEDULE. The schedule for 1930 has been no exception to the rule.

More than 20 months were given to the preparation of this schedule by a joint committee. The GENERAL FARM SCHEDULE at every census must be more or less a compromise among various sections and various interests. It is a census of agriculture for the country at large and not for any particular Bureau or Department of the Federal Government in Washington.

In her test lasting one year Tiddledywick's Quality Girl yielded 1,000.62 pounds of butterfat, the equivalent of 1,250 pounds of butter, and 17,278 pounds or 8,036 quarts of milk, netting Mrs. Neal a profit of $976 above feed cost.

Tiddledywick's Quality Girl did not receive exceptional care while on test. For six months of the time she stayed in the pasture day and night. Throughout the 365-days she was milked entirely by machine. In a previous test she became the world champion senior 4-year-old Jersey producer, 305-day tests, with her record of 328.44 pounds of butterfat, the equivalent of 1,035 pounds of butter, and 12,845 pounds or 5,974 quarts of milk. She has been awarded two Medals of Merit, the highest medal reward of the American Jersey Cattle Club, for these two outstanding test records.

Mrs. Neal owns a Jersey herd that is recognized as one of the leading herds of the Pacific Coast. She went to Oregon from Connecticut in 1920 and her herd has been developed in the past nine years. To date cows in the herd have won ten Silver Medals, six Gold Medals and two Medals of Merit for high production. Mrs. Neal's Jerseys are entered every year in the leading dairy cattle shows of the West and always bring home some of the blue and purple ribbons. At the present time the herd includes four grand champion cows and several junior champions.

Mrs. Neal's farm is located near Oregon City. It comprises about fifty acres of land and is modernly equipped with sterilizing plant, electric refrigeration and all equipment necessary for a sanitary, efficient dairy plant. Milk products from this farm, because of their high quality, command the top market price.

Mrs. Neal is assisted now by her three sons, Richard in charge of the dairy, Robert in charge of the farm work, and John the show man, but she is the active head of the business she has created.

Crop rotation is both preventive and a control measure for plant diseases that are caused by nemas, or nematodes. If a nemic disease contaminates a soil, through infested seeds, nursery stock, implements or the like, crop rotation will prevent or at any rate hinder its establishment. If the pest is already established, crop rotation is one of the best means by which soil can be cleaned. It is absolutely necessary to keep out the weeds if good results are to be expected through crop rotation.

Woman Owns National Champion Cow

Yielding 1,000.62 pounds of butterfat in an official 365-day production test, Tiddledywick's Quality Girl, purebred Jersey cow owned by Mrs. Florence Gale Neal of Oregon City, Oregon, has brought renown alike to her owner, her state and herself. Already a world Jersey champion by virtue of a previous record, Tiddledywick's Quality Girl now gives her owner the distinction of being the only woman to breed and test a Jersey cow making a 1,000-pound butterfat record.

THE D'HANIS P. T. A.

On account of postponement of the March meeting due to bad weather the D'Hanis P. T. A. held its regular meeting at the school house on Wednesday afternoon, April 2.

The meeting was called to order by the president and different business matters were discussed. Mrs. Joe Rieber gave a poem about Texas wild flowers and Mrs. Ferd Rock read a paper on Teaching a Child Truthfulness.

Prof. J. L. Williams made a report on the last County Council meeting and then gave a lengthy discussion about an impending school problem.

Arrangements were made to have representatives at the district meeting of the Association at Uvalde and at the Medina County Council at Hondo, April 25.

The next meeting of the P. T. A. will be held on Thursday, April 24, and all members are urged to be present because at this meeting officers will be elected for the next year.

SECO COMMUNITY CLUB.

Thursday evening a large per cent of the members assembled at the school for the monthly meeting. Before the discussion of business matters the following interesting and enlivening program was rendered.

"America," Song—Audience.

"Pep," a poem—Miss Agnes Rothe.

Guitar Solo—Mr. Alfred Rudinger.

Children and the Dentist—Mrs. Henry Poerner.

"Out Where the West Begins," Vocal Solo—Mr. W. O. Rothe.

An Appreciation of Books—Mrs. Louis Pichot.

Vocal Trio—Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Rothe and Miss Sarah Rothe.

President Henry Poerner then declared the meeting open for business. Roll call found many answering with quotations, inspiring vim and sincere application, from men who devoted their lives to the advancement of fellowship and education leaving selfish pettiness in the obscure background.

Various favorable reports and communications were given out, among them one by Mr. W. O. Rothe of the County Health Officer's visit at an early date for an examination of the children; by the secretary, Mrs. W. O. Rothe, of the district P. T. A. meeting in Uvalde on April 7, 8 and 9 and of the County Council's sincere urging of a full attendance at its meeting in Hondo on April 25.

Miss Josie Rothe read a letter of information on the U. S. decennial census which is now being enumerated. This information is sent by the Bureau of Census to all teachers to be read before the schools.

At the close of school on April 24, we will have a box supper. A program is also being prepared by the teachers for this happy occasion for the children.

Love for picnics by country folks again evidenced itself when the club voted unanimously to have one. Final plans for the frolic will be completed the evening of the program and box supper.

The president then asked Mr. W. O. Rothe to take the chair and preside over the election of officers. The fol-

the Catastrophe that befell Mrs. Greer's Cake

One of Mrs. Greer's masterpieces—an angel food cake—was basking in the oven's glow, taking on that coat of tan so fashionable these days—especially necessary to cakes of quality.

"Some think it's all in the beating," said Mrs. Greer inwardly as she cautiously lowered the door and peeped in, "but I claim that baking has just as much to do with . . ."

Just then . . . the telephone in the front hall rang.

"What can you expect?" she asked irritably when her husband came home a few minutes later. Between them they viewed the ruins of what had once been a promising cake. Tears welled up in her eyes.

"I can't bake a cake and answer the 'phone at the same time," she wailed.

"No, you can't", soothed Henry Greer as he put his arm around her. "What you really need, I guess, is an 'extension' telephone near the kitchen."

Telephones where you need them save time, steps, housewifely patience—even scorched cakes. Had Henry Greer but known it, telephones are being installed in kitchens, these days.

Few know that the extra cost of one or two "extensions" is somewhat less than that of the single telephone they now have.

By a wisely placed "extension" or two, an expert telephone man can often double the convenience of the telephones in your home.

Just then . . . the telephone rang!
